The success of our loans is due no doubt partly to the plentifulness of money, and this in its turn is, to no small extent, due to the closing up of fields of enterprise which used to offer so much temptation to English investors. But it is due also, and perhaps especially, to the fact that the colonies are becoming better known and more implicitly trusted by the capitalists of the United Kingdom.

As we have seen, there are sections

The relative progress of New South Wales

It is as well, therefore, to point out that though the facts are as Mr. BADEN POWELL has stated them, much of the progress of New South Wales has been due to the expansion of its staple industry. WOOL, PRODUCE, AND STOCK REPORT.

WOOL.—There have been no public sales in the market this week, and last week's quotations may be repeated. The tone of the English market is firm, especially for the fine descriptions, some telegrams quoting an advance in the price of these of from 1d. to 1d. per lb.

SHEEPskins.—The demand for sheepskins induces the belief that next week's auction sales will yield firm prices.

[illegible]

LEATHER.—At the leather sales this week there was no important business transacted. The following are reported by Messrs. Bots and Saunders' descriptions well built, inferior qualities were still dull of sale. The auctioneers' reports are as follows:—Black, 60 to 70; dark brown, 60 to 80; dressed, 11d.; black 8d. to 10d.; dressed, from 9d. call, 22d. to 30s.; tanned, 14d. to 20d.; burned, 6d. to 14d.; raw, 10d. to 12d.; black, 10d. to 12d.; beast, 6s. 6d. to 12s. 6d.

FALLOW.—Twenty one does were offered, and 250 sold. The market was very quiet, and prices were not so firm as last week. The lot generally exhibited good quality. The following are the auctioneers' estimates at £25; best, £34 to £35.

HINDS.—Eighteen offered yesterday, 8700 sold. There was a fair demand for all qualities. The following are the prices obtained at auction, 6d. to 4½d.; medium from 3½d. to 3¼d.; and light and stunion realized 4½d. Hinds hind, 2s. to 6s.; hind, 1s. 6d. to 2s.; do. yearlings, 1s. to 2s.; do. hangers over 24s. per dozen.

HOGS AND PIGS.—A good demand was noted for home bred stock. The following are the prices obtained: from ½s. to 33s. 6d. per 100; other descriptions from 6s. Beans sold in fair request at from 8s. to 45s.

CATTLE.—The following are the prices for horse tall, which commands from 14d. to 16s.; mares worth 9d. to 11d.; cow, from 4d. to 1s.

SHEEP.—This produce is readily salable at 8½d. to 10½d.

BROWN CATTLE.—Since the following there is more disposition to buy the stock. The following are the prices reported: 400 head of cattle for Messrs. Dargatz and M'Donnell's Westabridge, in conjunction with Mr. O. Dougherty.

BROWN SHEEP.—An inquiry was made active, and the following have been secured: 500 pure Australian merino

They ought to fix the value of it. In estimating this value, they would also judge of the witnesses, all of whom they might know. They all knew that some of the witnesses were not men of the highest moral qualifications, and it was very often supposed that in these cases, surveyors and others were very different in what they put before a jury, or masters of the ship. But it was for the jury, taking a fair view of the evidence, to decide upon the value of the goods to be fixed by the evidence irrespective of the interests of individuals. They had to determine whether the high value was to be placed upon the goods, and whether or whether the value should be that fixed by the defendant. It was said that if the land were put at a considerable time certain things might be done with it. But they had nothing to do with it. Neither in this nor in any other case could they go into the question of what might be the result if a man did not do it. They had to decide upon the value of the land, and some fancied that a person might expect to make a profit in that way. Where a person had a business, and the property was necessary to carry on his business, it might be that the very locality had a value to him, and the question then would be whether the actual value of the property merely would cover the loss he might suffer by not having the land. But they had to put at the same business connection. But nothing of that kind arose here. They had simply to consider the value; and they had to decide upon the value, and to consider the purposes to which the property could best be applied. And witnesses had told them that the most profitable way was to place buildings upon it. They had to decide whether the rent could be got from those buildings. They had been told the rent of them, and what it would cost to erect buildings of that kind. Taking a fair view of the evidence, they had to decide upon the most profitable way in which the land could be used, and then what was the proper value to give. Something was said about the fact that the land was not a large piece, but that the stone in a quarry not opened, and on a portion of the land, was worth £2000. Against that there was the evidence of Mr. Young, who said the stone was not a large piece, and what was said was worthless. But if the place were wanted to be used as a quarry, they could not have the land for the purpose of erecting buildings upon it. They had to decide upon the buildings that they might quarry. So also, if stores were put there, they could not have the cottages and the stores. The stores were there, the cottages were there, and the value of the nature there was a wide divergence of opinion. One witness valued the whole of the materials, if the cottages were taken down, at £1000, and the other said that the land was worth £1000. But nearly all the other witnesses had valued them at £2000. He did not hesitate to say, that if the materials were taken down, the land was worth £1000, and he would only point out that it was for them to consider whether they would take the valuation of the plaintiff or that of Mr. Mill, or whomsoever they had chosen.

The jury retired to consider their verdict, and before a few minutes' absence returned into court and informed the judge that they were agreed upon their verdict. They were, the foreman said, ten to two. On hearing this the counsel on both sides agreed to take the verdict, and the judge then asked the jury to sign the verdict. The value of the property being fixed at the Government valuation, £2870.

The Court then adjourned till 10 o'clock on Monday next.

The following is the list of cases not down for hearing on Monday:—Gouldell and another v. Minister for Works, Lucas v. vane, Robertson and another v. vane, Lucas v. vane.

COBURN'S INQUIRIES.

The City Coroner, Mr. M. H. Shiel, J. P., yesterday morning held an inquest at the residence of the deceased, Mrs. Mary O'Connell, 60, South Circular road, on the sudden death of Frank Riley, who had been remanded there some time, in order that he might receive medical attention.

Riley was found lying on his back on the floor of a bathroom, where shortly afterwards he was found lying face downwards on the floor in a state of which he died a few minutes later.

"Coroner," who held a post-mortem examination on the body of the dead man, it appeared that he came from the city, suffering from influenza, and that he must have been, sooner or later, resulted in death; his heart, liver, and lungs were diseased, and there was trace of the influenza covering the whole of the system.

The immediate cause of death was, in the medical stated afterwards came to a stand, and he got out; he was startled that until after he had heard the cry "Stop! Stop!" he did not become alarmed. He said he did not know how he would have known it by the vibration. Wm. Wilson, mechanical designer, who had been a passenger by the train, deposed that he was in the train at the time the accident occurred; when he got out the train was in motion; he could not say whether the train was in motion when the lady fell, but he said that he saw her fall about 10 yards before the time he alighted and when he heard the cry on the fall of the lady; he then turned round, and saw the train stopped, and he did not think it possible that the train could have stopped and again got in motion between the time he turned round and the time he saw the train stop.

leader Morrison fell, a passenger by the train, was lanced, but his wounds had no very direct bearing on the case. It was a very important fact that had the train stopped and moved on again while it was on the track he would have noticed it, but he did not notice any thing of the kind. He was in the car at 10:15 a.m. on Monday morning, at 10 o'clock, when the jury will visit the Patterson station, and on their return journey will be taken to the Governor's office.
